Mulally had proven that at the Boeing Company, where he was credited with saving the commercial aircraft division from a series of catastrophes ranging from the Asian financial crisis of the late 1990s to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, that had cost Boeing most of its business.

Nine Things I Learned from Alan Mulally

Ford was battling its own dysfunctional corporate culture and was losing customers due to "lackluster" designs and poor quality. Its share prices and debt ratings had plummeted, and the company was projecting a 2006 loss of more than $12 billion. In the midst of this maelstrom, Ford appointed former Boeing executive Alan Mulally as its new CEO.
